

ACDIS Undergraduate Travel Scholarships
for Internships and Study Abroad Research in International Security

The Program in Arms Control & Domestic and International Security (ACDIS) at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (UIUC) announces the availability of scholarship awards in amounts up to $500 to support undergraduates engaged in an approved internship or study abroad research program during Winter 2015, Spring 2016, Summer 2016, and Fall 2016.

These scholarships are designed to subsidize student engagement in internships abroad relevant to international security, and applications fitting this description have the greatest chance of success. In addition, students seeking funding assistance for internship placements in the United States with a significant international security component or traditional study abroad programs that include a significant amount of independent research on a topic pertaining to international security are also eligible for support.

Award recipients will be required to produce either a paper or poster on a topic related to international security and will present their research at an ACDIS-sponsored event the semester following their return.
